In whatever form, religion is bound to exist, despite all material-progress of the world. Science without religion will lead us to destruction. Science has given us power fit for gods but in the absence of religion we use them like small children. Even in the age of advanced technology we have to hold fast to the well tried lamp of faith. The advancement of science and technology was made religion more necessary. No community in the world, as a result of progress and education, is likely to give up religion.
